““I think it’s not the city’s responsibility to provide parking for jurors,” Broadnax told The News Tribune last month. Businesses around the County-City Building need metered parking for their customers and clients, he said. It would not be fair to those constituents for jurors to tie up those spots all day, he said.

Broadnax pointed out that King County jurors summoned to duty at the courthouse in downtown Seattle are not reimbursed for parking. “There’s nothing unusual in what we’re doing,” he said.
